BERMONS PREACHED IN ENGLISH CHURCHES
By the Rev. Phillips Brooks. Svo, pp. 311. E
P. Dutton & Co.

These fourteen sermons are well worth a perusal.
In style they are beautifully clear and limpid; in thought they are vigorous and catholic; in tone they are reverent and uplifting, and their aim is pre-eminently that of all true preachers—the building of character.

It is needless here to go into any extended analybe well to indicate briefly one or two of the most salient characteristics of his sermons. First of these may be mentioned their practical aims. They are preached for men and women in the daily walks of life. They are not theological treatises; they are not arguments for the bolstering up of a sectarian creed. Their illustrations are taken from the common things of life, the trees, the fields clad in verdure, the mountains bathed in light and shadow, or the beauty and grandour of the never-resting sea. Thus the preacher speaks not in the dialects of the schools, but in "a tongue understanded of the peor.."

Again, Mr. Brooks is careful not to give to interesting are the discussions of David and his school, and of the modern schools of Europe as represented in the Paris International Exhibition. Mr. Armitage has not an exalted idea of the present condition of painting in France, nor is he satisfied with the tendencies of art in most of the Continental schools. On the other hand he has a lively appreciation of the qualities of intellectuality and refinement in English art. His judgments are brief and summary, not entering into any profound dis-cussion of asthetic principles, and as criticism cerrefinement in English art. His judgments are bruch and summary, not entering into any profound discussion of aesthetic principles, and as criticism certainly leaving something to be desired, but in general they are plain, sensible and independent. The lectures devoted to the technical branches of his subject, such as drawing, color, composition, finish, etc., are full of practical advice, and will be found of great service to those who would learn how to judge of the merit of paintings as well as to young artists. The amateur will find the whole book exceedingly readable.

THE TASTE FOR RARE BOOKS.

ITS GROWTH IN THE UNITED STATES. WESTERN PEOPLE NOW HEAVY BOOK-BUYERS-

VALUABLE COLLECTIONS. "Books," said a Broadway dealer in rare volumes recently, "even more than pletures and bric-

He turned the thin vellum pages of an ancient missal, a volume of ordinary library size, bound in red velvet, the leaves gilded, a work executed early in the fifteenth contury. The contents were in Latin, the characters in black letter, every one worked with the pen by the hand, per-baps, of some forgotten old menk, and standing forth as selear and perfect as a faultless modern itthograph. Scattered through the work were brillianly colored miniature paintines of Scriptural subjects: Christ in the Garden, before Pilate, the betrayal by Judas—all finished with photographic detail, and with exquisite taste and skill. The borders of the pages and the initial letters were traced with designs of the same rich and delicate fancy that devoted a life-time to this testimonial of re

" I refer more particularly," continued the bookseller, " to that class of books which have attained a fixed place in the esteem of the student, or offer a particular attraction to the amateur or collector. Values fluctuate to some extent, and are influenced from time to time by the changes of fashion prevailing among collectors, but an article of this sort, you can understand, is always one of the gems that do not chane much except to incgrease in value; as a rule the absorption into permanent deposi-tories of the more desirable books, manuscripts and literary curiosities causes scarcity, and prices, like those of good wine, improve with age. When a man who has a collection of books finds himself in financial straits, his books are the first to be sacrificed before his pictures or curies, though you have heard him land them as his dearest friends, never to be parted with. This may be nocounted for, possibly, from the fact that he can usually obtain a better percentage on the first cost-a weighty consideration-than could be hoped for from his other treasures; indeed he is assured of a profit if he has used judgment in the collection of his books."

"Are libraries often ordered as articles of furniture !" 'To appear in the bookease as 'dun mies,' as in 'The Potiphar Papers 'l Not the class of books of which we have been talking. Cheaper books I have known to be ordered to fill shelf space, and an enterprising owner by getting some of his bookish friends, to furnish the titles of well-known rarities, could resort to 'dummies,' and possibly might get the reputation of being the owner of many coveted volumes. They, however, are too valuable to be purchased except as investments as well as for use. There are frequent instances where the sale of a carefully selected library has returned a marked advance on its first cost. I am reminded of an instance in which a gentleman of means and cultivation, who lacked the technical knowledge of texts and editions, to be acquired only through experience, desired me to purchase for him such works as I thought would retain their market value. From time to time I was able to secure exceptional copies of rare books until in a few years he found himself possessed of a valuable library. I was surprised at its extent when I came to examine it with the view of placing it on the market. The sale, I remember, was something of an event, and it netted him 25 per cent profit. He was often very nervous, especially when ignorant acquaintances, hearing what he had paid for some of his books, would assure him that he had been TRICKS OF THE TRADE. "The trade has its peculiar tricks. There is one, well known now, which was practised effectually some years ago. A large collector known to have some of the rarest books offered to several colleges $10,000 each, the amount to be taken in books at the sale of his collection. Of course the colleges were desirous to improve the chance. The sale was widely advertised: all book-dealers were present and bidding was high not only on the nuggets but on everything. The collector realized a profit of $100,000 after his gifts were deducted. Yes, the same thing has since been attempted but not with success, the ruse being too well known to book-buyers. The collecting of books, autographs, typographical rarities, etc., is one of the hobbies of those who have the means and cultivation to enjoy it. There is in it the advantage over other mere hobbles that it cannot be prosecuted without a decided gain in general and special knowledge over a wide range of topics.

victimized, but he has since become quite a connoisseur.

"Who are engaged in this trade now i"
"In exclusively rare books there are few dealers now. "In exclusively rare books there are few dealers now.

D. G. Francis used to be known as the dealer of whom you could get anything. J. W.-Bouton has now the largest and most valuable collections. A. L. Luyster and Charles Welford have many rare old works. Neither Boston or Philadeiphia has large dealers exclusively in rare books. New-England with its cultivated population has always been a large purchaser. Some of the very best books have been absorbed by it. Providence, Rhode the pracher speaks not in the dielects of the schools, but in "a tongue understanded of the schools of that overworked word he stands forth as a Liberal. There is in his atterances no compromising of what he believes to be true. "The dainty seeptic, dabbling in unbelief," will find no comfort in these sermons. But in his preaching he has learned what so many preachers are but dimly conscious of, that clear convictions and charity are enscious of, that clear convictions an

People who pretend to marvellous pedigrees should remember the story of the French Duke of Levis, who used to show an old painting which represented one of his ancestors, a Prince of Judat, bowing to the Virgin Mary, who says, "Couvrez-vous, mon cousin." The family of Croy possessed a not less abourd picture, which showed Noah entering the Ark, and exclanding, "Sauvez les papiers de la maison de Croy!" estate."
"Something like seventy years ago there existed in the small town of Market Rasen, in North Lincolnshire, at smail town of Market Basen, in North Lincolnshire, an ordinary firm of country attorneys entitled Tennyson, Maine & Vane. Old George Tennyson was a sharp fellow, and in the course of his business got together a good deal of property in the neighborhood, and on leaving the firm set up as a country squire. Fixeldest son was Dr. Tennyson, a clergyman, and the father of the Foet Laureate who has Just been made an unnecessary Fecr. Hystoliest son took the name D'Eyncourt on inheriting the property, being the father's favorite—to commemorate, as it was said, this descent from the Earls Scaradale and Daincourt, who came over with William the Conqueror, and Sr B. Burke was employed to discover a pedigree, a copy of which I now ployed to discover a pedigree, a copy of which I now have. After old George left the firm, Madne & Vane came to grief. Maine soon afterward died, and tradition' says that Vane was somewhat hard-pressed for a living and took to driving a stage-coach. His son, H. M. Vane, was I heat, last week knighted at Osborne. Altogether the dants of the firm appear to have done pretty

THE DUOMO OF FLORENCE.

Prom Correspondence of The London Standard.

The ceremony of ancovering the façade of the Cathedral of Santa Maria del Flori, at Florence, took place last week. The scene in the Piazza dei Duomo was most picture-que; every window was decorated with gay-colored silks, sathus, and damasks of various lines. The whole of the Piazza was crowded. All around the railings of the fine old Eaplistery the people were closely packed, but there was no pushing, and not much enthusiasm. At last the great Joy bell the Sartinella, with all the other bells of the cathedral, pealed out, and announced to the city that the draperies which concealed the three great doors of the façade were about to be lowered. At the same moment two royal carriages arrived, in which were Prince Eugenio di Carimano and suite, who was received at the Royal Stand in front of the Baptistery and facing the cathedral, by the Syndle, the Prefect, and all the other dignitaries of the city. The Archbishop of Florence, Monsignor Cecconi, who had arrived some time before the Prince, conversed with him for a few moments, and then at a signal from the Prince the nuge coverings were lowered, and the beautiful façade was exposed to the admining gaze of the multitude.

The work as a whole is very fine; the colored marbles are liefs are in exquisite taste. Over the centre door is a noble bas-relief of Our Lord in glory, surrounded by angels, blessing the city. Directly under the great rose window is a large statue of the Blessed Virgin, holding the Infant Saviour in her arms. The niche in which this statue is placed is elegantly decorated with twisted columns, inlaid with mosales of red, gold and green. On each side are ranged the Twelve Apostles in separate niches. In the arch of the centre door is a fine fresco, representing the Virgin receiving oblations, with the lifes symbolical of the city at her feet. This freeco will, eventually, be replaced by a mosale of the same subject. A provisionary model of the two systems for completing the to

MEDICAL AND SURGICAL NOTES.

FISH AS NUTRIMENT FOR THE NERVOUS SYS-TEM .- Sir Henry Thompson's recent denunciation of the notion that fish eating increases brain power is not indorsed by the London press, on the ground that, though it has long been perfectly well known to physicians that the phosphorus theory must be discarded, still the fact is beyond dispute that fish is a form of food which is easily digested, and proves specially nutritive to the bodies of brain workers. Concerning Sir Henry Thompson's opinion that the only way it acts is by putting a man's body in proper relation with work he has to do, the Lancet body in proper relation with work he has to do, the Lancet rem wrks that though this be quite time, the brain is an in-tegral part of the body, comprehending, moreover, a con-siderable number of the most important centres of the nervous system, whence the body as a Whole derives its power—therefore in putting a man's body in proper rela-tion with his work, fish may chiefly act by supplying his nervous system with specially available nutriment,

Another Use for Glycerine.-Dr. Soper in The Lancet, recommends the use of a mixture of equal parts of glycerine and castor oil, slightly flavored with oil of almonds or lemon, as an agreeable substitute for caster oil. He states that of this mixture a teaspoonfu is an effective dose, and in cases of chronic constipution,

The principal feature was the substitucion of the pariotic have been opened ing the opening of new wells in Warren County and adjoining tructs. But all of those that have been opened within the last two weeks are now falling of rapidly in production, and it is safe to say that the expectations which were entertained of the finding of a rich oil pool in the Porcupine Company's territory northeast of Balltown will be considerably disappointed. In spite of the periodical scarces excited over development work in the oil regions the fact remains that no new threatening territory is at present a callable greatly to increase the production of crude oil. The pipe line fluttres, however, continue to reflect a small accumulation of stocks. The excess of runs over deliveries now amounts to over 100,000 barrels. But the average daily runs to January 24, are only 55,172 barrels in January, 1883, and 72,419 barrels in January, 1883, and 72,419 barrels in January, 1883, and 56,680 barrels in January, 1883, and 72,419 barrels in January, 1883, and 51,439 barrels in January, 1883, and 51,439 barrels in January, 1883, and 51,440 barrels in December, 1883, and 28,038 barrels in January, 1883, and 51,440 barrels in December, 1883, and 28,038 barrels in January, 1882. The deliveries have rise to 51,739 barrels, against 49,286 barrels in January, 1882. The deliveries in January, 1882. The deliveries in January, 1883, and 51,440 barrels in January, 1882.
